TESSAHOC 1979

Cohasset High School
Cohasset, Mass.

DEDICATION

This year, the class of 1979 has voted to acknowledge a very special lady. Her presence is familiar and welcomed both around Cohasset and in the schools. A multi-talented woman, she is an avid fan of the Cohasset teams, especially football and basketball. Presently, she is President of the Boosters Club, an organization that recognizes students' accomplishments in sports. The very nature of her job enables her to become friendly and popular with the students of CHS, as she drives spectators, teams, and students safely to their destinations. When she's not transporting students, she serves as playground aide at the Joseph Osgood School.

Around town, most everybody knows her as a generous, kind, and thoughtful person. Also, many have seen her promenading on the stage in Pajama Game and Wagons Ho! Along with her normal endeavors, she has hosted two CHS foreign exchange students.

The senior class is exceedingly grateful for all her assistance and cooperation in helping to enliven "Gong Show I" and "Tricycle Basketball". To this accomplished, talented, friendly, and active supermom, grand-mom, and Cohasset citizen, we, the class of 1979, sincerely dedicate our yearbook to you, Mrs. Beth Goff!

BEGINNINGS

In the beginning, only a vast void and mass confusion concerning the yearbook existed. Armed with a techni-cropper, a grease pencil, and the spirit of determination, jumbled ideas soon began to surface from the frazzled brains of the staff. First of all, the editors said, "Let there be organization," and the yearbook staff became paralyzed, paranoid, and perturbed. "Alas, where do we begin? What a dilemma!" At this point, the staff was divided into and made responsible for specific departments. Then, the editors demanded, "Let there be imagination," and there was . . . some. Out of obvious necessity, the editors commanded, "Let there be pictures," and soon CHS was infiltrated by candid cameras that discovered many minor stars. After a while, the editors ordered, "Let there be typists," and consequently, typists were drafted. Soon, the familiar tap . . . tap . . . tap . . . #@!* . . . tap . . . oops! provided easy listening music for staff meetings. Faced with financial woes, the editors requested, "Let there be sponsor money, donations, and inheritances," and there was none, much to the dismay of the poverty stricken staff. Therefore, out of desperate need, the yearbook staff formed a pan-handling coalition to beg in the senior corridor and in the village of Cohasset. Suddenly, the editors gasped, grimaced, and groaned, "Let there be deadlines," and unfortunately, deadlines were thrust upon us. Sunday meetings began to dominate the weekends. But, lo and behold . . .

Remembering 1979

In the year 2029 what will the world remember of 1979?

A spacecraft shooting pictures of Saturn and Jupiter . . . China's 4-foot tall Teng shaking hands with a 7-foot Harlem Globe Trotter . . . A wild Super Bowl . . . A man with a beard in Iran making gas cost more.

And what will we remember 50 years from now?

The winning-est basketball team in Cohasset history . . . A real gong of a Gong Show . . . Our Jazz Ensemble winning the state championship at Berklee School of Music and the Norwood Jazz Classic Festival . . . Disco dancing and a really weird Halloween party . . . the Drama Workshop winning the Emerson College regional performance award . . . our soccer team making it to the state play-offs and coming tantalizingly close to . . .

The world may have trouble recalling much more about this year without digging back into the history books. But we, the Class of '79 will have our memories of events in our last year of high school — for many of us our last year at home — sealed into our brains.

It all started with the first wet snow flake that fell on the New England coastline . . .

From underneath a thick covering of snowfall (27 inches) that started on February 7, 1978 and ended 32 hours and 40 minutes later, we emerged to find a different world. While biology students were working on squirming microbes, scientists in England welcomed the first test-tube baby. As scientists were rejoicing about their triumph, the reborn Jimmy Carter was applauding the diplomacy between Anwar Sadat and Menachem Begin at Camp David. The School Committee had considerably less success trying to pull the dollar and education back together again. With the births came the deaths. Rome buried two Popes and reached beyond Italy to elect a Pole to become John Paul II.

Meanwhile, in Guyana, the would-be messiah, the Rev. Jim Jones, ordered his Peoples Temple followers to drink from a tub of poisoned Kool-Aid — and more than 900 of them died. But not all Americans worried about what they drank. A new French import, Perrier, became the white lightnin' of upper class Americans. Apparently Massachusetts' Governor King thought 18-year-olds should be ingesting the harmless carbonated bubbles rather than the malt.

With bubbles rising up everywhere, the seven-year-old hippo named Bubbles became a national heroine for escaping from a zoo in California. Riding in the largest bubble of all was the crew of three balloonists who rejuvenated the spirit of Saint Louis by making the first trans-Atlantic flight in the balloon, the Eagle Two.

Meanwhile, the greatest holder of carbonated bubbles, John Belushi, was racing across the screen yelling "Toga!" Animal House was not the only nostalgic movie of this year. For John Travolta and his fans, Grease was the 1950's Happy Days antidote to the frenzied 1970's fierceness of Saturday Night Fever. Crowds drew to see the story of Freed's "rock 'n roll" show in American Hot Wax. Others went to see a reminder of Vietnam in Coming Home starring Jon Voight and Jane Fonda, slim ties — they're back too.

The past did not bring back good memories for all people, especially Boston Red Sox fans. We were reminded of the familiar last-day-of-the-season sounds of the years 1948, 1949, and 1950. Fans in Boston rejoiced at hearing of Billy Martin's ferocious attacks on Reggie Jackson and pitcher Ed Figueroa. But when Martin said that Jackson and George Steinbrenner deserved each other: "One's a born liar, and the other's convicted," the axe fell on Martin and worse on the Red Sox. Bob Lemon, the placid new Yankees coach, and the cannon-ball thrower Ron Guidry reduced the Red Sox lead to zilch and then won the pennant in a sudden-death game.

There was more to grieve about than the Red Sox loss. Hubert Horatio Humphrey, the long-standing liberal senator from Minnesota, lost his fight against cancer. In San Juan, Puerto Rico, on a windy day, Karl Wallenda, the 73-year old father of the acrobatic family, took his last step on a high wire. Meanwhile, Americans viewed in horror the mini-series on the Holocaust, watching a well-to-do Jewish family suffer the Nazi abuse and die in the dreaded concentration camps.

Even Woody Allen appeared to be getting moody. Woody stumbled onto his first non-comic film Interiors. The master of the stumble himself, Chevy Chase (imitating Gerry Ford), made the Not Ready For Prime Time Players into the hilarious and popular Saturday Night Live. One of the hottest items on the show was the comedian Steve Martin who with Dan Aykroyd played a pair of "wild and crazy guys." Martin always has a cure for problems. One of his more notable problem-solvers was the following: "I heard the other day that the sun was going to collide with the Earth. When I heard that, I said 'OK, that's it. That does it. I'm getting a household smoke detector.'"

An equally hot item, Billy Joel, whose 52nd Street hit the 3 million mark, combined rock and Tin Pan Alley sounds to gain a great public response. His songs, "My Life," "Just the Way You Are," and "Big Shot" hit the hearts of many Americans because of their honest and truthful lyrics. But Fleetwood Mac's Rumours sold more than any other album this year (13 million and counting). Pin-up posters of Cheryl Tiegs, Farrah-Fawcett Majors, Cheryl Ladd, and Suzanne Somers also sold like hotcakes, as did running shoes.

This book, then, is simply an aid to what is in our memories. In the following pages we will see again the concentration of that basketball dunk shot and the knobby knees and hairy legs of our Powder Puff Cheerleaders swaying in a shaky pyramid . . . and what about our track and cross-country teams deep in meditation before doing their thing . . . and our soccer heroes shooting across Mazza Memorial Soccer Field like billiard balls yelling like screaming meanies . . . look at the faint smile on Mr. Ed Leary's face as he "bags" students.

And, of course, this book will help you remember what all your friends looked like — back then in the dark ages of the late 20th century. What's more it will help you recall what you looked like. In your formal portrait, hair combed, looking straight into the camera. In the halls. In the bleachers. In the beach parking lot. With a crazy grimace on your face as you are chatting in a class or in a study hall.

Who knows what we're going to think of our 1979 looks 50 years from now.

The only thing that's certain is that our clothes are going to look out of date. Our haircuts — well, really, did everyone look that way? We're going to look terribly young. School is going to look old and small. The dance steps are going to be something that our children think is strictly out of nostalgiaville.

But despite the faintly old-fashioned look that all of our up-to-the-moment activities will have taken on by the year 2029, there will be nothing out-of-date in our memories. What we see in the following pages will some day be for us the Good Ol' Days. Right now they are just the Good Days, our best, most funny, sometimes saddest, sometimes most carefree days before we went out into the world.

Take a good look at them now in '79. See you again in 2029! Nanu . . . Nanu.

I came from China, via Hong Kong to a place where everything is new to me. For the past few months, people have been telling me that I have made very good adjustments to the new things. I know I would have encountered many more difficulties and problems, had not the people in Cohasset given me so much love, support, help, kindness and encouragement. Cohasset is a beautiful place and so are her people. I am grateful that I am able to live and attend school here. I would like to take this opportunity to thank you — the people of Cohasset, my teachers, friends, schoolmates, and especially Mr. & Mrs. L. W. Prouty.

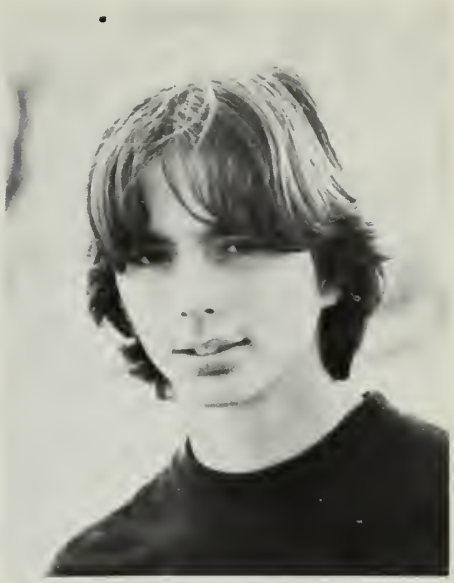
BRUCE DUNCAN



ROBERT HOOPER DURANT
Bob
Marching to the Promised Land
Where the honey flows and takes you by the hand
Pulls you down on your knees,
While you're down a pool appears.
The face in the water looks up,
And she shakes her head as if to say,
That it's the last time you'll look like today.
Sail away, away
Ripples never come back.

Suddenly there was a roar in my ears and blackness rushed by. In front of me was a pinhole of light. As I plummeted headlong towards it, the dot of light began to get larger. Numbness controlled my body as I struggled against the shimmering gateway's suction. The darkness began closing in to a tunnel leading into the blinding spot of light. Suddenly I burst through. Awakening I found myself in a long wooden box. Faintly I heard the sound of shovels smoothing dirt above me. SD

SPECIAL REPORT TO THE YEARBOOK:
Whatever Happened to the Class of '79?
June 3, 1999

Dear Mom,

After leaving my post as war correspondent in Hull, I was given a job by CBS to search out my old classmates for the new television show, "Whatever Happened to the Class of '79?"

My first mission brought me back to the newly renovated Cohasset High School, where I met with Principal Kurt Rever, who, for a mere $5, directed me to Ruthann Sargent who was busily typing pages for the spring supplement to the 1979 yearbook in the Home-Ec room. She sleepily muttered some assorted school gossip about algebra teacher Ellen Figueiredo and told me where to find the townies. I hopped into my Honda Civic and sped down to the Red Lion Inn for a quick beer, where I solemnly told my troubles to bartender Tim O'Connell, a former pro hockey goalie, who suggested I eat dinner at "With Infusinos" restaurant in West Corner. Arriving at this high class establishment, I was impressed by an elegant black Cadillac, obviously owned by the famous West Corner Barber Shop Quartet. Out of the car climbed Bass Mike Meallo and his associates: Robert "Tones" DiTullio, Drum Sticks Espinosa, and Jim Polito, all clad in white tuxes and pointy black shoes. Inside, Mary Lagrotteria, the quite hospitable singing and dancing waitress, took my order, and I later enjoyed the cuisine. On my way to Kimballs Motor Inn, now owned by former dishwashers Martin Patrolia and Bruce Duncan, I noticed Arthur Glasfeld and Andrea Davis on Rocky Beach, setting off missles towards Weymouth in the name of the Revolution.

The next morning, taxi driver John Carhone drove me to Sawicki International Airport in eight minutes. Boarding Hannon Flight 48 bound for Florida, I encountered pilots Rick Hobson and Peter Cook. Mr. Cook, obviously intoxicated, was removed by security guard Peter Chapman. Four gorgeous stewardesses, Barbara Curelli, Alison Dickson, Mimi White, and Joyce Crowley, clad in miniskirts and high heels, argued over who was to escort me to my seat. Just before the plane took off, Day Care center workers Dinah Souther and Carolyn Goodwin ran in with a trail of screaming children. This was the beginning of a hectic trip.

The plane had been off the ground only a few minutes when Lauren Carroll, famous reporter for the National Enquirer, sat down beside me. After a brief hello, she proceded to tell me various bits of news about members of our class. For instance, Pam Russell married the very tall, dark, and handsome owner of Wall Street. Andy Trask and Janice Millard became co-owners of Dial-A-Date, a computerized dating service. James E. Vivian, ex-Broadway actor, and Steve Ramsay, ex-yacht broker, have recently been ordained Episcopal ministers. Joe Durkin was named executive Vice-President of AMF Higgins Sporting Goods Company. And, finally, novice writer Greg Smith sold the first copy of his book . . . "The Only Way To Go," after twenty years since publication.

After a rough landing, I took a cab straight to Miami General Hospital, where I spoke to head Physical Therapist Diane Maloney. She directed me to the laboratory of Dr. Claire Carey, the recent recipient of the Nobel Prize for discovering a cure for the common cold. She is now studying the beneficial effects found in sunrises. Dr. Betsy Gwinn also received a Nobel Prize for her research of Psychobiology. In the West Wing of the Hospital I found Dr. Judith Vanderlugt, a well-to-do dentist who recommends Bubble Yum and onion dip to her patients. On my way out of the hospital, Dr. Polly Curley, who is in the process of writing her memoirs, suggested I take a cruise aboard a Paul Rice, Incorporated ocean liner. She informed me that several of our classmates could be found sailing on the Pacific Ocean. I wanted to make several stops across the country, so, instead of flying, I rented a Toyota Corolla, and started my trek to San Francisco.

I was driving along a dusty road in Alabama, when some buckshot penetrated one of my car tires. As I climbed out of the car, I was greeted by Lynn Crough, who was jammin' on her fiddle. She apologized for the mishap, informing me that hillbillies don't shoot out car tires on purpose. Her fellow hillbillies helped me change my tire, and I continued on my journey. After long, exhausting hours of driving, I made a stopover in Houston, where I was greeted by oil tycoon, Radu Florescu, who invited me to dinner at his air-conditioned penthouse. After an exquisite dinner prepared by his beautiful Rumanian wife, I thanked him for his hospitality and checked into a nearby hotel.

Early the next morning, I was awakened by hotel hostesses Karen Ainslie, Debby Scott and Sam Sladen, who were having a quarrel as to which one was to serve my breakfast. When I asked them how they came to be in Houston, they told me the tragic story of their Mustang breaking down en route to California twenty years earlier. Even after hearing their sad tale, I was still determined, and zoomed off toward the sunny shores of California.

You know, Mom, everything they say about the California night life is true. I spent my first night at the Boarding House in San Francisco where I was entertained by the world famous "Monkettes," Sally Sisson, Lydia Trettis, Kim O'Connor, and Beth Donahue. These four ladies have succeeded beyond their wildest dreams. When they become bored with sunning themselves at their villa at Saint Tropez, they hop on over to their beach front palace at Malibu. The group had just completed a world benefit tour with all proceeds going to the underdeveloped of the world. The four wish to thank all their old high school friends who allowed them their start back in 1978. I also spoke with John Hines who, when not hosting the Gong Show, serves as the Monkettes manager. He spoke highly of Mary Jo Ferocious, a bright new star in the world of punk rock. She accompanied the Monkettes on part of their tour and drew praise for her voice and actions on the stage. Female vocalist Linda Deignan also appeared on tour with the Monkettes, and was signed to a five year contract by Mr. Hines.

I would have liked to spend more time enjoying the town, but business came first. So, the next morning, I purchased my cruise ticket, and boarded the beautiful ocean liner. I was greeted by cruise director Laurie Silvia, who, upon hearing the nature of my work, happily informed me that several of our classmates could be found aboard the ship. I thanked her and made my way up to the sundeck, where I noticed a small crowd of autograph hunters gathering. Four time grammy award winner Cheryl Wilmoth was trying to make her way through the crowd, accompanied by her manager, Jerome Turner. Mr. Turner announced that Miss Wilmoth would be happy to sign autographs at a later time.

Just before the boat was to depart, I noticed corporate executive Linda LaBreque coming up the ramp. Miss LaBreque, accountant for the World Trade Center in New York City, was accompanied by her many assistants. As the boat sailed out of port, I headed for my cabin. In the corridor I passed James Froio and Michael Palimeri, co-chairmen of Froio and Palimeri Distilleries. They were discussing the price of their new 185-Proof "Gin-Fro." I reached my cabin, but was unable to open the door. Chief Purser Douglas Saleski noticed my dilemma, and, while explaining that several of the cabin doors are difficult to open, proceeded to my aid. I thanked him and went into my cabin.

That evening I had dinner with two very successful men: Patrick Plante, a very well-to-do-businessman, and Chris Colocousis, a famous free-lance photographer. Chris informed me that Jonathan Foell had been made editor of National Lampoon Magazine only two weeks earlier. As we were discussing Jonathan's rise to the top, lovely hostess Kim Diab brought us our drinks, prepared by bartender Paul Rattenbury. Just before we placed our dinner order, a slight disturbance broke out at the bar. However, heman Barry Buckley, Brian Conlan, Dan Prendergast, Scott Hulien, and Nathan Towle eliminated the problem.

Our dinners, prepared by chef Myles Collins, were superb. The after dinner entertainment included a volleyball exhibition given by Ed Donnelly, Steve Janscies, and Scot Muir, all of whom are professional volleyball players. As I was walking back to my cabin that evening, I met United States Equestrian team member Leslie Jones, gold-medal winner at the 1996 Olympics. When I told her of my reason for being aboard the boat, she suggested I investigate a small village high in the Swiss Alps. She knew that some of our classmates could be found there. I thanked her and retired for the night.

I was up early the next morning typing up my notes (Ha, Ha) when somone knocked at my door. I was greeted by the ship's entertainment committee; Rhonda Goff, Christine Kelley, Kim Messner, and Mary Walsh. They let me in on the many activities going on up on the deck. Hearing that, I left my work, and went topside for some relaxation. I played a few hands of poker with world renowned fashion designers Keith Elam, Carla Latson and Tracey Young, before heading to the galley for breakfast. I ordered a cup of coffee and sat out on the after deck. There appeared on the horizon a sail boat, moving at a fast clip toward the ship. It was not until the boat moved closer that I recognized the occupant to be Brian Keane, world class sailor of small boats. I called to him, and he responded by yelling that he was late for the 1996 Olympics; with that brief exchange of words, he sailed away.

Later that afternoon, I spotted two more boats sailing near the cruise ship. The first one belonged to the famous artist, Virginia Langford. We had a brief discussion with the aid of megaphones. She told me that she had been commissioned by the Queen to do a royal portrait. Before heading for England, Virginia had to make a quick stopover in the Big Apple to speak with the editors of the New Yorker magazine. I also spoke with Bob and Sam Durant who are in the process of sailing a patched up raft around the world. Mom, Dr. Curley was right; many former classmates are sailing on the Pacific.

My cruise ended without any further encounters. Upon my arrival back in San Francisco, I immediately purchased an airline ticket to Zurich, in the hopes that Leslie's advice would prove beneficial. The flight to Switzerland was long but enjoyable. Pilots Joe and Bob Barrow flew the plane with expertise, while I chatted with stewardesses Linda Ryan, Sandy Stover, Anita Ross, Debby Davis, and Virginia Leahy. Arriving in Zurich, I obtained directions to Gniiks, the name of the town Leslie had told me about. When I came upon the town, I went directly to the ski lodge. Owner John Golino told me where I could find the multilingual, cosmopolitan ski instructor Jocelyn Kennedy. Jocelyn, owner of a ski chalet in both Switzerland and Colorado, took time off from her work to have lunch with me. During lunch, she introduced me to millionaire professional free-style skier David Sullivan, who had just completed a world tour.

As I was walking through the town after lunch, who should I meet but Liz Whelan! She was taking pictures for SKI Magazine. We stopped in a nearby café to talk over old times. When she heard of my project for CBS, she offered me some information about some of our former classmates. John Howley, Paul Farren, Matthew Salerno, Brian Keating, and Rich Tebbetts formed a basketball team entitled "The Cohasset Globe-trotters." Larry Evans and Tim Smith became professional hockey players. After outstanding careers as professional wrestlers, Bill Roy and Christopher MacKenzie opened up a chain of sporting goods shops and weight-watcher clinics. Liz really keeps up with the sporting world, Mom. She also told me that Brad Ditmar was a ski instructor in California, and that Bob Baird had been made contract negotiator for Santa Claus. Boy, I had trouble writing all of this in my notebook!

On a tip from Liz, I boarded another plane three days later. My destination: The British Virgin Islands. There, Liz had told me, I could find Chuck Dillon, new owner of Foxy's Bar. As I got off my plane at the airport, I noticed a group of people who looked very familiar heading for the lounge. Moving closer, I recognized the faces of a group from my high school class: Bill O'Brien, Susan Quilty, Tom Piepenbrink, Barbara Taylor, Gaye Ripley, Marianne Burke, Gerda Cahill, Kathy Stanford, and Michael Sullivan. They were as surprised to see me as I was to see them. Bill told me that they were travelling around the world looking for Rick. I wished them all the best of luck, and set off to find Foxy's.

Chuck said that he would be glad to help me with my search. He had, however, heard very little about our class since he took his million dollars and moved to the islands. He did know that David Gunville was involved in a political scandal, and is presently serving a five year sentence for bugging political opponent Darilynn O'Neill's office, and that Susan Pottenger was head driving instructor of standard cars at the Pottenger, Inc. driving school. I had to decline Chuck's offer to stay on the island for a few days, because my deadline was fast approaching.

And now, Mom, for the final leg of my journey: back to good old Cohasset. There I met with Dennis Valdes, director of the Rotary Exchange Program in Cohasset, and his assistant Chun Chan. After speaking with them briefly, I headed for my office.

Well, there you have it, Mom. This is the story of my journey around the world. A journey in which I attempted to locate my fellow classmates from the class of '79 at Cohasset High School. Believe me, it wasn't easy. Tracking down some one hundred and thirty people all over the world never is. You know what I'm going to do? I'm going to ask for a raise!

Your loving son,
Mark

THE ALTERNATIVE SCHOOL

The Alternative School is more than just being able to take outside courses and independent work. The Alternative School is an attitude, it is an outlook on life and learning. The Alternative School room plays a vital part in this. But to fully experience this you must come up and sit in the room amongst the members. I think you'll find the communication very stimulating and uncluttered, you may even join in. It is this sort of communication that is essential to living and interacting with other individuals. Freedom, openness and an atmosphere encouraging you to trade opinions are common in the room. The regular school seems to invoke small talk, there is minimal small talk within the rooms, discussions usually being relevant and laden with creativity. Creativity is so essential to making avenues with which the students can find themselves and become true individuals. This is exactly what happens in the Alternative room. Everyone in the room at any given time immediately unites into a family or rather they reunite, just being a member of the program makes you part of the family. If a regular student comes into the room, he is also immediately a part of this family. There is no jealousy, no competition, no negativity. You can talk about your fears and problems and most personal anxieties. The people will only help and understand, typical of true families. There is an obvious bond of love between the students which enables them to cope with life and learning in a place that in many cases goes against their grain. This sort of haven is, for me, a necessity and I would be miserable without it. This is why people in the program with many CHS courses need the program. They come to the room to unwind and talk with other members, discuss things that will help them get through the turmoil of high school. The room is a catalyst to extending learning into a twenty-four hour experience. The way it should be.

Have you ever noticed the many posters decorating the corridors urging the various teams to get psyched? The 20 odd members of Rousers meet weekly to paint original slogans rousing the spirits of CHS students. President Heidi Chase and Vice President Jocelyn Kennedy organize the meetings and got Tricycle Basketball underway for a great success. Jane Higgins, our Treasurer, keeps tabs on our finances and is reponsible for recording weekly attendance. Usually, Rousers is associated with football, but this year the club carried through their poster-making into spring sports. Give 'em a cheer for their effort!

COHASSET HIGH SCHOOL DRAMA WORKSHOP

"The Director" Mr. Emmons

Theater is alive and well and living at Cohasset High School. Popularity in high school drama started on the upswing with a spectacular performance of "Godspell" in 1976. Of course, we've lost some good actors and actresses since then, but there are some new and inspiring students making their way up. Mr. Ron Emmons, CHS Drama Workshop director, likes the idea of new input from underclassmen.

The Cohasset Drama Workshop is not a club, despite all the rumors about Emmons' exclusive group, since open tryouts are held before each new play. Naturally, Mr. Emmons wants an actor or actress with some experience to take on the more challenging roles, but there are always spots open for the newcomer. Indeed, the presence of many new faces in this year's fall presentation of "Story Theater," an episodic play of eight fables, made the play a tremendous success, maybe not in terms of audience size, but certainly in terms of quality. It is safe to say that Mr. Emmons was able to reach his goal for Cohasset, which is to "achieve an effective, amateur production."

Compared to other directors, Mr. Emmons is very liberal. He allows his students of theater to enjoy the most important part of acting, creativity. For the most part, Ron Emmons is not bogged down with all the little aspects of theater, but rather likes to keep his productions simple, making them all the more effective.

Because of the Workshop's success in last year's state festival, barring certain unforseen distractions that occurred, Mr. Emmons, although not enthusiastic about theater competition, decided to try again. On January 13, the workshop competed with other high schools at Emerson College bringing the "Story Theater" fables, "Two Crows," "Master Thief," and "Bremen Town Musicians." Despite having to compete with larger schools than ours, the "Story Theater" troup, composed of Missy Barcomb, Cathy Collins, Beth Donahue, Meri Fink, Jonathan Foell, David Hanlon, Mary Lagrotteria, Scott Muir, Lisa O'Toole, Sally Sisson, Jim Vivian, and Jerry White was awarded best company. At the same time, Beth Donahue was presented with the best actress award. Pretty good, a twn out of three sweep for Cohasset. You deserved it, Mr. Emmons!

An equally good choice for the Workshop's second play was "The Good Doctor" by Neil Simon. This show also proved to be a great success even though, as usual, a large crowd was lacking. We started with a bare prop room and a few resources and made "Good Doctor" into a quality show worthy of Neil Simon's name on the program. From the very moment that Jerry White sneezed in "The Sneeze," we knew the play would be well received. Disa Pratt's uncontrolled passion for Jim Vivian in "The Seduction," Meri Fink's nauseating portrayal of a drowned lady in "The Drowned Woman," and Jonathan Foell's total nervous breakdown in "Defenseless Creature" brought great commendations from the crowd. Cathy Collins, David Hanlon, and a partially competent backstage crew were equally commendable in their roles.

If you wonder where we go next — well, it's off to the regional festival, semi-final, and of course, the state festival at John Hancock Hall. We are putting all of our money on "Story Theater" and are sure to once again put Cohasset on the map — of what state we don't know. Good luck, Mr. Emmons! We've got the silver polish all ready to shine the trophy.

STATE SOCCER TOURNEY

POST SEASON PLAY

Rockland 4 Cohasset 2

The year 1978 marked an important time period for Cohasset soccer. Under the watchful eye of coach Ron Mazza, the Varsity soccer team compiled a record of 8 wins and 2 losses. Our only two defeats were to Duxbury. Having lost only twice, we accumulated enough points to qualify for the Massachusetts State Tournament.

For the first round Cohasset was seeded against Rockland. Expectations ran high but actual skill seemed to be lacking. "We were flat today," said Coach Mazza. "We could take any game we played this season and put it out there and we would have won. What can I say." Once in a while teams have off days; and unfortunately, Cohasset was plagued with this condition in the playoffs.

The soccer team extends its warmest thanks to Coach Mazza for his dedication and hard work over the past four years. We hope other Cohasset Soccer teams will have the thrill of qualifying for post season play.

SKIPPERS MAKE THE STATES

THE WINNING INGREDIENTS

For the second time in the history of Cohasset basketball, the boy's varsity team qualified for the state tournament. Under the direction of 2nd year coach John LeVangie, the boys instituted a tradition by winning more games than any previous team.

With the start of the season, LeVangie had the nucleus of a strong club with three returning starters. Captains Matt Salerno and Paul Farren along with point-guard John Howley had plenty of playing experience and provided leadership. The Skippers were also aided with transfer student Brian Keating from New Jersey. With Brian's jumping ability and quickness he became an asset and filled a starting position.

Senior guard Tom Higgins unable to play the previous year due to injury, also contributed to constant success of the Skippers. Bill O'Brien the third two-year veteran on the squad added his talents and dedication to the cause of Victory. Rich Tebbetts probably the most improved player of the season came up with some fine performances in tight game situations.

Underclassmen on the squad included junior Mark Goff, Jimmy O'Brien, Jim McCarthy, and Bill Taylor. Another promising member of the squad is sophomore Billy Kurtz who, with varsity experience, will continue the winning tradition at Cohasset.

Although the players get the recognition, the games were won due to the efforts of the entire program. Coach Eddie Minelli for example, who receives no pay for his work, has earned the respect and gratitude of the whole team. Also the scouts, the cheerleaders and the fans deserve endless appreciation for their support. From the team to all involved with the program. — THANK YOU!!!

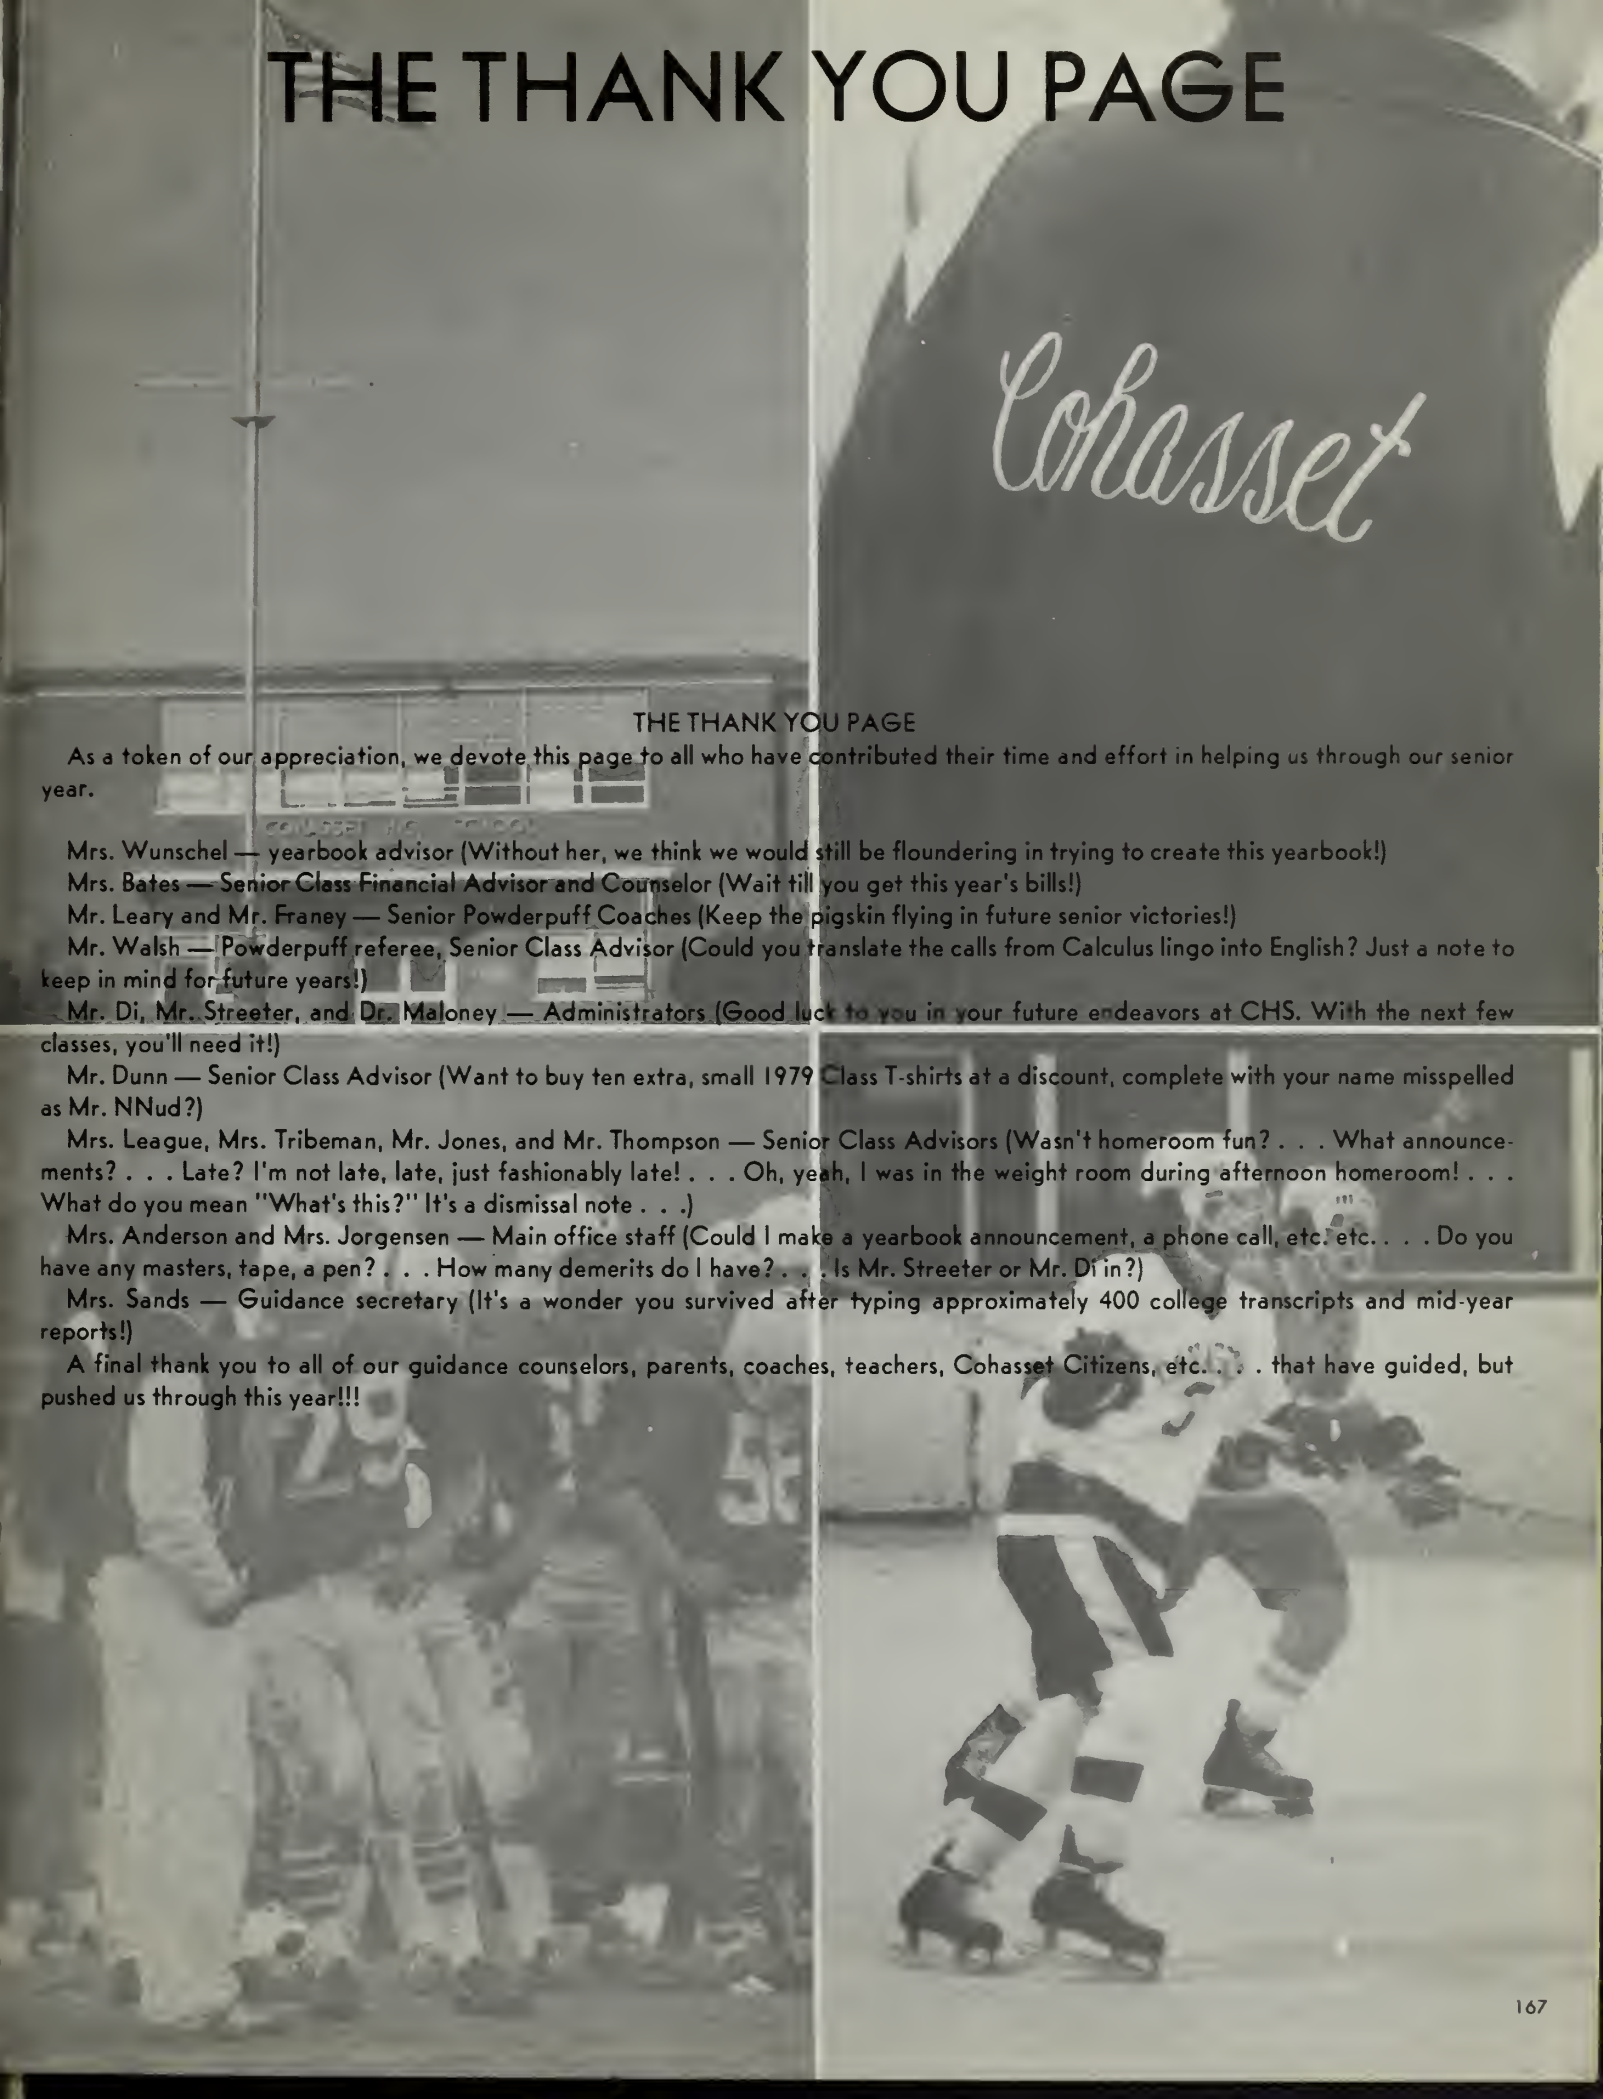
THE THANK YOU PAGE



THE THANK YOU PAGE

As a token of our appreciation, we devote this page to all who have contributed their time and effort in helping us through our senior year.

Mrs. Wunschel — yearbook advisor (Without her, we think we would still be floundering in trying to create this yearbook!)

Mrs. Bates — Senior Class Financial Advisor and Counselor (Wait till you get this year's bills!)

Mr. Leary and Mr. Franey — Senior Powderpuff Coaches (Keep the pigskin flying in future senior victories!)

Mr. Walsh — Powderpuff referee, Senior Class Advisor (Could you translate the calls from Calculus lingo into English? Just a note to keep in mind for future years!)

Mr. Di, Mr. Streeter, and Dr. Maloney — Administrators (Good luck to you in your future endeavors at CHS. With the next few classes, you'll need it!)

Mr. Dunn — Senior Class Advisor (Want to buy ten extra, small 1979 Class T-shirts at a discount, complete with your name misspelled as Mr. NNud?)

Mrs. League, Mrs. Tribeman, Mr. Jones, and Mr. Thompson — Senior Class Advisors (Wasn't homeroom fun? . . . What announcements? . . . Late? I'm not late, late, just fashionably late! . . . Oh, yeah, I was in the weight room during afternoon homeroom! . . . What do you mean "What's this?" It's a dismissal note . . .)

Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Jorgensen — Main office staff (Could I make a yearbook announcement, a phone call, etc. etc. . . . Do you have any masters, tape, a pen? . . . How many demerits do I have? . . . Is Mr. Streeter or Mr. Di in?)

Mrs. Sands — Guidance secretary (It's a wonder you survived after typing approximately 400 college transcripts and mid-year reports!)

A final thank you to all of our guidance counselors, parents, coaches, teachers, Cohasset Citizens, etc. . . . that have guided, but pushed us through this year!!!

Finished at Last

. . . IN MAY, TO THE RELIEF OF ALL, A YEARBOOK WAS DISTRIBUTED, AND THE CREATORS SAW THAT IT WAS GOOD!
